The Third Term Question.

President Grant's letter of denial in regard to the third term candidacy is a document as modest, straightforward and unmistakable as one could easily be made. He says, after properly explaining his sensible silence heretofore:

"To recapitulate, I am not, nor have I ever been, a candidate for a re-nomination. I would not accept a nomination if it were tendered, unless it should come under such circumstances as to make it an imperative duty, circumstances not likely to arise."

Some may argue that in case a man is tendered a nomination for a "desirable office," it is manifestly his "imperative duty," under the circumstances, to accept. And therefore that Grant is still a third-term candidate. But there are few who will be so suspicious and unreasonably as seriously to interpret the President's qualifying sentence in that way.

The Tribune puts a construction upon the explanatory part of the President's letter which is simply outrageous to the sense of decency. The Sun has been bitter in comment upon Grant and his administration, but has never yet dived down to the level of the mud-sills of meanness, which the so-called Leading American Newspaper is daily capable of doing. As regarding motives, the Tribune man certainly "lets the public see the very bottom" of his thought, when he interprets the President's letter in this way:

"He has done some extraordinary things in his day, but nothing more singularly characteristic than this. He is still nearly calculating and balancing just how much he thinks the Republic owes him, and with the frankness and candor lets the public see the very bottom of his thought even yet. He does not think he is quite even yet. The Generalship was worth more than these two terms of the Presidency. It was a life office, and he expected that Congress would let him keep it until he was tired of it, and then let him retire 'with the rank and a portion of the emoluments of the office—no much needed.' He positively seems to be proposing a new trade to Congress; suggesting that if they want to get him out of the field for another term—which he evidently thinks is due to him—they might arrange it by giving him back his rank and pay as a General, and then put him on the retired list."

If the Tribune pursues the even tenor of its way, it will be long ere the unenviable distinction of being the Leading American Buffoon.

The New York Mail, in a review of Sherman's Memoirs, says:

"Whether the General has been unjust to brother officers, whether he has withheld praise where it was due, ignored just claims, arrogated too much to himself, and needlessly wounded the amusements of those still living are questions which it would be altogether out of place to examine here. But we think the impression left by the Memoirs on the mind of the general reader will be that they are the work of an honest man, of one who aims to tell the truth, and that whatever errors or omissions he has fallen into, they are not the result of one who has in the slightest degree falsified consciously what he had to tell. Even in relating his own conversation in moments of excitement, he gives it as it stands in his memory, with all its imperfections on its head. He calls Stanton 'indifferent' and 'wide Hampton' a 'braggart,' he does not hesitate to give praise unstintingly when he thinks it due."

THE WRONG PULPIT.—It is not an unusual occurrence for a man to get into "the wrong pulpit," but down at Mount Holly on a recent Sunday, a young minister got into the wrong pulpit, and caused considerable embarrassment. It seems that he was from Princeton, had been engaged to fill the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church, and was left in Burlington on Saturday night. A friend drove him to Mount Holly on Sunday morning in time for service, but landed him at the wrong church, in the pulpit of which he was met by the pastor, when explanations ensued. After his amusing adventure, he reached his destination in due season and officiated for his Presbyterian friends.

FOOD FOR LEAN PEOPLE.—If any one wishes to grow fleshy, a pint of milk taken before retiring at night will cover the scrawny bones. Although nowadays we see a great many fleshy females, yet there are many lean and lank ones who sigh for the fashionable measures of plumpness, and who would be vastly improved in health and appearance could their figure be rounded with good solid flesh. Nothing is more coveted by thin women than a full figure and nothing else will so rouse the ire and provoke the scandal of one of the "clippier builds" as the consciousness of plumpness in a rival. In cases of fever and summer complaint milk is now given with excellent results. The idea that milk is "feverish" has exploded, and it is now the physician's great reliance in bringing through typhoid patients, or those in too low a state to be nourished by solid food. It is a great mistake to scrimp the milk picher. Take more milk and buy less meat. Look to your milkmen, have large-sized, well-filled milk pichers on the table each meal, and you will also have sound flesh and light doctors' bills.

A FACT WORTH KNOWING.—Are you suffering with Consumption, Cough, Colds, settled on the breast, or any disease of the Throat and Lungs? If so, go to G. R. Davis, Druggist, and get a bottle of BISHOP'S GREAT SYRUP. This medicine has lately been introduced from Germany, and is selling on its own merits. The people are much interested in it, and druggists all over our country are writing us of its wonderful cures among their customers. If you wish to try its superior virtue, get a Sample Bottle for 10 cents. Large size bottle 50 cents. Three doses will relieve any case. Try it.

Westminster.

A large audience assembled at the Chapel, last Sunday evening, to attend the fifth anniversary exercises of the Westminster Sunday School. Two novel features marked the occasion one consisted of a Review of the Sunday School Lessons from May, 1874 to May, 1875. The 32 questions were comprehensive, carefully selected, and well arranged. The first three quarters of the year were answered by the older scholars; the Bible Classes also taking part. The Infant department, under the superintendence of the Misses Gallagher and Crane, also gave prompt replies to the questions in the fourth quarter, which were propounded by Mr. Cook.

The speaker of the evening, was Mr. De Witt of Newark; a gentleman deeply interested in the Sunday School. After the conclusion of this address, Mr. Cook, by a flattering but truthful introduction, called upon a gentleman in the audience to make a few remarks; he said, "We have with us a dear friend, to whom this Sunday School owes more than to any other individual, Mr. George P. Ludlam, our former Superintendent." Mr. Ludlam spoke briefly, with his customary earnestness and interesting manner.

Two "three minute addresses" were then made; one by a friend of Sunday Schools from Newark, and one by the pastor, Dr. Kennedy.

The reports of the Secretary and Treasurer showed a steady progress in the various departments of the school, the whole number in attendance being two hundred and one; of this number thirty-six are church members. The Infant class numbers sixty-seven. There are thirty-two teachers connected with the school. But one death has occurred during the year.

The presentation of prizes concluded the exercises. One prize was given for regular attendance during three years; two, for regular attendance during two years, and two for regular attendance for one year. Two scholars also received prizes for having each brought five new scholars; these scholars not being in attendance at any other Sabbath School.

A Miraculous Escape.

Thomas L. Atkins, a gentleman from New Jersey, has for the past few days been stopping at Dingman's Ferry for the purpose of fishing in the numerous trout streams in that vicinity. On Saturday morning last he had a very narrow escape at "High Falls" on the Adams. This creek is about eight miles in length, and on either hand rises a perpendicular and almost unbroken wall of rock, while in a number of places the stream pours over falls from fifty to one hundred and fifty feet high. In climbing down the course of the stream, Atkins suddenly found himself at the brink of the main falls. The rocks all through these falls are kept wet and slippery by the spray which is blown against them by the force of the falling water, and as Mr. Atkins was in the act of turning (whether by accident or some other cause) he lost his balance, and in endeavoring to recover himself, slipped and fell. With remarkable presence of mind he caught hold of the projecting rock upon which he had been standing, and clinging to it with the tenacity of a drowning man. While clinging to the rock he endeavored to find a foothold, and by that means help himself up or hold on until help came, but he found none, and, as if to add to the agony of the moment, his hands kept slowly slipping from their hold. Driven almost crazy with terror, he turned his head and looked down into the foaming water of the pool, full 80 feet beneath him, and with a prayer to heaven for mercy, his hold relaxed, and he fell backward and disappeared, feet first, into the seething waters. He soon found time to breathe before he came to his remaining strength, he succeeded in reaching the shore and crawling a few feet up the bank, when his strength gave way, and he fell into a deep swoon. It was some time before he came to his senses, and when he did he was so much exhausted that it was some time before he could proceed. He finally succeeded in reaching the Dingman road, where he was fortunate enough to secure a ride to his hotel.

Father McGlen is the pastor of a Roman Catholic Church in Boston, of which John Fanning is a member. Recently Fanning was married to a Protestant girl by a Protestant clergyman, contrary to the teaching of his own denomination. Father McGlen spoke of the occurrence in the pulpit, declaring that the offending parishioner was guilty of a crime by living with a girl who, in the view of the church, was not his wife. Fanning sued the pastor for slander, and the case is now on trial.

The Baxter canal steamer City of Newark reached New York on Saturday by way of the Erie Canal from Oswego, having made the run in four days and twenty-one hours. She brought 6,650 bushels of wheat and a deck load of general merchandise. She is the first steamer which has arrived since the canal was opened.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes has written what is pronounced a very spirited poem for the Centennial of the Battle of Bunker Hill, and it is soon to be published in Boston.

Gen. Butler's new granite mansion at Washington will be completed soon, and he expects to move into it next fall. Current report says it will be the finest private residence in the city.

California claims to be capable of supporting twelve millions of people.

Thirteen million fruit and forest trees were planted in Nebraska last year.
